The engagement of all pupils in routine physical activity is instrumental in developing a holistic educational experience. Emphasising regular physical activity cultivates a culture of well-being, both physically and mentally, amongst learners. This, in turn, leads to improved focus, concentration, and overall academic performance. Moreover, fostering a habit of participating in physical activities from a young age instils lifelong values of health and fitness. By ensuring the participation of all pupils in physical activities, we are not only promoting a healthy lifestyle but also facilitating the development of essential life skills such as teamwork, resilience, and discipline.
